Accident—The Casualty Record.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 4.—A torrent of water rushing down a hill last night resulted in loss of life and property. Three people were killed and seven badly injured. So far as known the list of killed is as follows:

Mrs. J. HORN.
WILLIAM KRIEGER.

Those wounded fatally are:
PHILLIP STORER and 5-year-old son,
AUGUST ADAMS,
FREDERICK KRINGER,
JOHN WILLIAMS.

The accident was the result of the late heavy rains. Upon the hillside above Page street was a deep gully, the natural outlet of the water from the country above. A year ago Page street had been filled up across this gully, leaving a small culvert to carry off the ordinary water. This culvert had long ago been choked up and the recent storm had filled the deep basin to the brim, making a lake two feet existent and forty-five feet deep. On Monday afternoon a sharp crack was heard from the lower side of the fill, but there was no thought of immediate danger. Suddenly at night the fill let go, and with a mighty rush the water came down and swept down upon the low land below. In ten minutes the whole thing was over, and the work of clearing began. A general alarm of fire was sounded, and a crowd of people gathered. Wagons in the city were on the scene. Men, women and children were fished out of the wreckage and wrecks extending nearly half a mile. The water was so deep that the water had carried away the gas-pipe and left everything in darkness. It is possible that

Next to the loss of life may be increased. The danger from the flood water has been held back by the graded streets and the water has been finding an outlet for the water during the last few days. The water has been held there since the phenomenal rainfall of last week and had gradually undermined the fill, which was thirty-five feet deep. When the softened earth gave way last night, earth, sidewalks, trees, houses and human beings were hurled down the grade towards Concord street, some thousand yards away. The loss on property, at a low estimate, is $50,000, and the loss of life is still uncertain.

Mrs. August Adam's body was recovered this morning at 10 o'clock. The police have been at work since daylight searching for many other possible dead and thousands of people have collected to see the terrible devastation of the flood. The electric carline was washed out and had to build a new terminal this morning below the scene of the flood. There are still two missing and Mrs. Stroekel, of the injured, is in a critical condition.

OMNIBUS PASSENGERS CAUGHT BY A WATER

TRIESTE, Aug. 4.—An immense dark funnel-shaped cloud made its appearance over the harbor to-day and in a short time was joined by a pillar of water, which seemed to be sucked up until its apex joined the lower extremity of the cloud, forming a tremendous water spout, which after reaching the quay, stroke, doing damage to property. No loss of life was caused. An omnibus passing along the quay when the water spout broke was overturned and the seven passengers sustained injuries. Tram-cars along the quay were thrown from the tracks and a number of buildings were damaged. Several minutes elapsed before the time of the information and collapse of the water spout.

UNDER CAVING CLAY.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 4.—The Pea Shore Brick & Terra Cotta Works, operated by August Reere, near this city, caved in this morning. A large clay bank in which a number of men were at work suddenly caved in. The men all escaped except one, John Ross, who was

AN ENGINEER KILLED.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 4.—The Louisville, New Albany & Chicago vestibule train which left this city at 12:40 o'clock this morning, struck a bull that had become fastened to a culvert, at Broad Hippie, nine miles north of here. The engine was thrown over, killing the engineer, H. Metzker of Lafayette, and dangerously injuring Fireman Charles Hall of this city. The train remained intact in the track.

MALDEN, Mo., Aug. 4.—While trying to swim the St. Francis River near Chalk Bluff, twelve miles south of this city Tuesday night, in order to arouse the ferryman for a party of friends, M. Linaham, bookkeeper for the St. Francis Lumber Co., was drowned within a few feet of the opposite shore.

DIED OF HIS INJURIES.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 4.—Chesley Graves, a very prominent young insurance man, walked out of a second-story window at his home on Tuesday night while asleep. He dislocated his hip and was so badly injured internally that he died this morning in great agony.

THE WALL FELL ON THEM.
Several Men Narrowly Escape Death on North Eighth Street.
Morris Madden, John Carroll and an 11-year old son of the latter, were caught in ing-a-cellar adjoining 828 North Eighth street this afternoon, when the wall of the house at No. 828 gave way and came down on them. They tried to escape, but they were all caught and partially buried by the debris. A fire alarm was given, and the firemen soon dug them out. Although considerably bruised, they all escaped without any broken bones or permanent injury of any kind. The lives of 824 Warren street, and Carroll at 218 O'Fallon street.

THE CARPENTERS.

The Committee on Constitution Occupies the Convention's Attention.

MEMORIALS RECEIVED ASKING FOR A DECLARATION AGAINST CARNEGIE.

An Effort Making to Meet the Planning Mill Owners for the Purpose of Settling the Strike—A New Scheme Evolving for the Holding of National Conventions.

The convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is now hurrying business very closely. The report of the Committee on Constitution, which was submitted yesterday afternoon, gave the body business of the very highest importance and plenty of it. The opening sessions, relating to officers and their duties, were adopted with some amendments of a minor character.

When the subjects of initiation and per capita tax were reached, a prolonged discussion ensued.

Sec. 50, relating to initiation, etc., was debated for a couple of hours; and sec. 52, embracing the subject of per capita tax, was passed without conclusion. The debate on sec. 50 was very earnest. The committee had reported a substantial increase in initiation and dues, with a view to strengthening the Brotherhood, and the discussion was decidedly in line with the committee, but there was considerable difference of opinion as to the extent to which, under the circumstances, the convention ought to go. It was urged that two years ago the Brotherhood adopted legislation that had not proved advantageous, and there was a general feeling that a slow and weigh well the possible effects of the proposed changes.

Memorials were read from a number of Eastern unions asking the committee not to use the structural materials furnished by the Carnegie Co. They were referred to the committee on resolutions with instructions to report at the earliest practicable moment.

The planning mill committee did not report, but members thereof assured the press that they were trying to get a meeting with the bosses, and would do their best to secure a conference this afternoon. They couldn't say that they had any lively expectation of getting such a meeting, but they would spare no effort to give the employers a chance to meet the men half-way.

THIS AFTERNOON'S SESSION. The debate on the constitutional changes was resumed this afternoon. The delegates are moving very slowly in this matter, they criticize the statement in a morning paper that there is a strong opposition on the part of a majority to hand the order over into the hands of George Campbell.

Upon adjournment this afternoon the delegates will take a carriage ride to the Anheuser-Busch brewery and other places of interest.

A LONG SESSION. The delegates expect no adjournment until some time about the middle or last of next week. They have just begun their work. One matter, on which probably a day or two will be consumed, is that of representation. A system of District Councils will be urged.

Of course, have representatives therein, and these bodies will elect delegates to the general convention. The effect of this will be to reduce the size and cost of the National Convention. It is believed, also, that it will satisfy the desire of the locals for representation, while each local is now entitled to representation in the general assembly, practically many of them are barred from sending delegates. It is said that there are about 100 delegates to the convention unrepresented at this convention simply because they cannot afford the expense of sending delegates.

Addressed by Gompers and Kilver.

The planning mill strikers had their daily meeting this forenoon. Addresses by Mr. Gompers and Mr. Kilver, President of the Carpenters' Brotherhood, enthused the boys to the utmost. Mr. Kilver assured them that the International Brotherhood was with them and its power would probably be thrown decisively in the scale before many hours if the employers should decline to entertain the offer of arbitration which the Carpenters' Convention had proposed. Mr. Gompers also added a few cheering words.

The Committee on a Fair Divide was able to see the employers yesterday, but expect a conference of some sort this afternoon. The outcome is awaited with much interest. If the bosses are disposed to treat them as equals, practically many of them are barred from sending delegates. It is said that there are about 100 delegates to the convention unrepresented at this convention simply because they cannot afford the expense of sending delegates.

The Ideal Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club have very generously tendered their services to the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH for its next excursion, Aug. 25. The club is composed of the following well-known gentlemen: H. J. Isbell, S. M. Stringer, F. E. Harrington, J. A. Harrington and Albert Bauer, vocalist. Their efforts will be much appreciated by the excursionists, as nothing is more delightful on the water than the music of the mandolin and accompanying instruments. This will undoubtedly be the most enjoyable excursion of the season, and is given to the want-advancing patrons of the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH. Remember the date, Tuesday, Aug. 25, 7 to 11 p. m. on the steamer War Eagle.

Death Preferred to a Bath.

DATON, O., Aug. 4.—Frederick Kaiser, an aged eccentric and wealthy miser, hanged himself yesterday as the result of a quarrel with his daughter, Kaiser, though worth over a quarter of a million dollars, dressed in rags and looked and acted like a distressed mendicant. For the past twenty-five years his daily vocation has been the collection of garbage and rags, which he sold to a dealer on his farm. His daughter, a cultured girl, endeavored to induce her father to clean up and discontinue his squalid gathering. His son, the oldest of the old man that he took his own life.

A Street Car Romance.

West End society circles are much interested in rumors of an approaching marriage between a prominent St. Louis merchant who has hitherto withstood the charges of the fair sex and the daughter of one of our leading professional men. The prospective bride and bridegroom made each other's acquaintance at a society party on a St. Louis & Suburban long car, and if rumor can be relied upon this is but one of a large number of engagements resulting from these delightful trips. The St. Louis & Suburban cars run to De Liolamont and Wells every two minutes and to Normandy and Hamona every fifteen minutes, and this road is the popular one for evening street car parties.

GARZA AGAIN.

The Mexican Revolutionists Pursued by a United States Marshal's posse.

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex., Aug. 4.—If the plans of United States Marshal Paul Fricks and his large posse of deputies do not fail, Catarrino Garza, the notorious Mexican revolutionary leader, will be in the hands of the law within the next two days. Garza was being pursued by several reputable Mexicans on the ranch of Cecilio Salinas, a revolutionist now out on bond, northwest of here. This information was at once telegraphed to Marshal Fricks at San Antonio, and he immediately left for this place. He immediately gathered together a large force of deputies and left for Garza's rendezvous.

The latter is surrounded by a few supporters, and it is expected he will resist. The federal officers went prepared to take the wild leader or return with his dead body. The capture of Garza is of great importance to the United States authorities. He has been in the hands of the Mexican revolutionists for the past three months to cover his tracks pretty well by sending out statements that he was in the country, and many telegrams have been printed in Northern papers locating him in various parts, endeavoring to escape to safer climes. All the while, however, he has been on Texas soil, concealed by friends.

Garza's movement was ordered in Mexico, Garza merely passing from this side with his personal staff and a few other followers. He was shot at the frontier and the reckless shooting of people on his capture caused him to flee to the Texas side of the Rio Grande. At Palo Pinto he married the daughter of a wealthy Mexican landowner and started a very little paper which he called El Libre Pensador (The Free Thinker), in which he began his assault upon the Mexican government.

Garza came first to public notice at Rio Grande City, where his political situation he shot a man named Sebre and, it is said, killed two Custom inspectors. He himself was seriously wounded in the affair. His recovery he went to Laredo, Tex., and soon became involved in a quarrel with a man named Martinez, who was afterwards assassinated. Garza next appeared at Duval, Tex., where he started another paper and more deadly than the first and where he had many number of quarrels and petty troubles, until at last he disappeared, turning up next at the head of his quixotic expedition, which he thought was going to overthrow the Diaz government at a single stroke. His little army was met in the neighborhood of Nior by 700 Mexican troops, and Garza was routed after a brief battle. This was in September last. Since that time he has lived the life of an outlaw, fleeing from the Mexican authorities on one hand and dodging United States troops on the other, for his expedition was a violation of international law which the United States could not overlook.

Garza is a man of splendid physique, 6 feet 10 inches in height, of fine military carriage. The fact that Diaz has offered $50,000 for his capture, dead or alive, will add zeal to the efforts of Marshal Fricks to take the bandit.

FEMALE DYNAMITE.

Attempt to Blow Up a Chicago Broker's Residence.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 4.—An attempt was made last night to blow up the residence of Charles D. Irwin, a wealthy board of Trade operator, at 2300 Calumet avenue, and the police are searching high and low for the would-be assassin, who is a woman. The attempt would have been successful had not persons passing by frightened the woman, who left a large can filled with a high explosive, and ran toward the lake. The can was discovered a few minutes later, but the fusers were afraid to touch it and called Mr. Irwin out. He picked up the can and on examining its contents discovered that it was more than half filled with giant powder. In all there was about ten pounds of the deadly explosive. The amount was sufficient, if exploded, to have blown the house and the actions of the woman leave no doubt in the minds of the police and Mr. Irwin that she intended to blow up his house and cause the death of all who were inside. The description of her as given to the police is that she was attired in deep mourning and wore a heavy black veil that fell below her waist. Mr. Irwin cannot account for the attempt. He says no woman have any dealings with the firm, hence the motive could not be one of revenge for loss of money.

Water From the Rio Grande to Be Used for Irrigation.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 4.—Acting Gov. Piementel and Gov.-elect Ahumada, of Chihuahua, Mex., arrived in this city to-day to confer with the officials of the United States concerning a division of the waters of the Rio Grande river for irrigation. That is the most vital question now commanding the attention of the people on the borders of Mexico and Texas. The scarcity of water in the river at this season and the dams of Mexico catching all the flow has caused a great loss to farmers on this side. Gov. Ahumada stated in an interview to-day that everything would be arranged satisfactorily; that Mexico would show her liberality and divide the water with her American neighbor fairly and equitably. He hoped this conference would be a precedent for all disputes between the two countries, believing that justice would more quickly be reached by appealing to the reason of both people, rather than by force of arms. The conferees will meet to-day.

GAS ECONOMIZER COMPANY.

Several Interests Absorbed by a New Corporation.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 4.—The American Gas Economizer Co. of Chicago has been incorporated, and will soon be in active operation. The incorporators are J. P. Elliott, Ebenezer Sprague, E. T. Gardner and George Daniels. This company absorbs the company hitherto known as the Francis Incandescent Gas-light & Regulator Co. of Illinois; also the United States Gas Lamp & Regulator Co. of St. Louis and several smaller enterprises of the kind in other parts of the country.

Mr. Elliott is the inventor of improvements on the lamps and regulators of the old company, and says the complete plan of organization involves two companies—one to manufacture gas lamps, which will be sold; the other to manufacture regulators, which will be leased and remain under the control of the regulator company. The stock of the two companies will be owned by the same parties and most of the stockholders are the same as those of the old companies. The consolidation seems to meet the views of all parties. Mr. Sprague, who travels a great deal and has business connections here, in St. Louis and New York, will act as manager at work. D. H. Lamberson, President of the old Francis company, will also be prominent in the consolidation. The lamps and regulators are to be manufactured in Chicago.

Destructive Storm.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 4.—The worst hail-storm that ever occurred in this section came down upon Kalamazoo and the surrounding country last evening, causing about $50,000 damage in the city and surrounding country. Some of the hailstones measured three inches in length and eight inches in circumference. Every green-house and skylight in the city was smashed and the hail had been bombarded with grape-shot. Every corn field within a radius of 10 miles square is a complete loss and oats are ruined.

OPPOSITION OF MARS.

Telescopes in Every Country Pointed at the Great Star.

The long-heralded opposition of Mars occurred last night. At about ten minutes past 12, the planet was exactly opposite the sun—hence the technical expression—"opposition." It was, a bright night and Mars glowed superbly in the southern sky. The moon was on the down grade in the west, and in the northwest Jupiter was looming grandly, and just above the horizon might be seen the tangled glow of the Pleiades. Nearly overhead was Cassiopeia; just below this lay was Perseus and Algol, the "demon star," in Medusa's head, and yet lower the Chariot with the splendid Capella as its "hitcher." Above Jupiter was the giant rectangle, the "square of Pegasus." In the northwest, the "square of the zodiac," the "square of the zodiac," its brightest ornament the matchless Vega, was descending the sky, and following it was Cygnus, with its striking configuration, the Cross.

To the naked eye Mars appeared no different than for some days past. It has been increasing in apparent size and in brightness for some weeks; the opposition was merely the time of its nearest approach to the earth, and there was no phenomenon to be observed such as takes place in eclipses. All over the world telescopes were directed towards Mars last night whenever the sky was clear, but the scrutiny has been going on for months. Astronomers generally have been studying the face of the planet with great assiduity in order to solve several much-discussed problems concerning the conditions prevailing there; and quite an army of observers have been very carefully measuring the apparent distance of the luminary from certain neighboring stars in order to solve first, the question of the distance of the planet, and, second, the distance of the sun.

These observations for distance began early in June, and will continue until September. They will form the basis of long and intricate calculations before results can be announced. Concerning the surface of Mars the principal information learned at this opposition will come from less than a dozen points. More is expected from the National Observatory than from anywhere else, since the largest refracting telescope in the world is there, a 36-inch telescope made by Alvan Clark. The Washington telescope (26 inches) will yield important results; this is the glass by which Prof. Hall discovered the moons of Mars in 1877. They have a 24-inch refractor at Princeton, and it ought to yield good observations. There are two or three excellent telescopes in Europe and on this continent in the houses of trained observers, and who are expected to contribute substantially towards the solution of the martian mysteries. But to Northern observers Mars, even when highest, is low in the sky, and the observations in the Southern Hemisphere, where the planet is nearly overhead, will be required to complement the work of observers this side of the Equator.

The astronomers at the Lick Observatory.

Mount Hamilton, Cal., are giving out news somewhat sparingly as to what they have seen there. Prof. Holden, who is in charge of the Mars observations, announces that not much is to be said of the results until the observations are completed and the whole work has been gone over. He warns the public against sensational announcements of discoveries on the planet, especially such as may be thought to indicate the possibility of interplanetary communication.

About 70 diameters is the highest magnifying power that can practically be employed on Mars with the Lick telescope; this makes the planet to appear as only 50,000 miles away. At culmination Mars is only 81 degrees high at this observatory and the atmospheric disturbances render it very hard to see the markings, and at times they almost disappear. Up to the present time Schiaparelli's canals have not been seen single, now appears double through the great refractor.

At this opposition the north pole of Mars is turned toward the sun, and the south polar cap, which was large and brilliant a month ago, is rapidly diminishing. This confirms the supposition of astronomers that these polar caps are composed of snow and ice. The refractors disclose another interesting feature. There are numerous dark markings within this polar cap, as if the body of the planet were more fully characterized. The moon has been learned of these tiny bodies until now, when the great telescope has shown that they are not of course to be foreseen, but it is the possibility of more and very important discoveries that keeps the thought of astronomers the world over turned towards Mount Hamilton. The observation here are making the most of the occasion, realizing that so magnificent a chance to investigate Mars will not again occur until 1909.

Mapping Mars.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4.—Observations of Mars were taken at the National Observatory last night by Profs. Hall and Fiske. They discovered nothing of canals reported to have been observed by Prof. Schiaparelli. Henry C. Moore, the well-known astronomer, who has been making close observations of Mars at Rochester, N. Y., says: "Mars presented no new features at mid-night. The workings were comparatively flat because of intense illumination of the disc. The snow cap is now small. The western limb from the snowcap northward seems to be more highly illuminated than the eastern. The light of the western limb appeared to be nearly white, but not so white as that reflected by the snowcap. In the Southern hemisphere there was quite a distinct greenish gray streak about 40 degrees from the pole.

PERSONATED H. C. LEWIS.

Benjamin J. Williams Charged With Fraudulent Use of the Mail.

This morning, Benjamin J. Williams was arraigned before United States Commissioner Crawford on the charge of using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes. Detective Lawler testified that H. C. Lewis, manager of the Southern Hotel, had received several letters in reply to letters purported to have been sent by him inquiring for a steward for the Southern Hotel. A salary of $120 a month was promised, and transportation to this city, but a deposit of $10 was required as an evidence of good faith. The letters were ordered addressed to H. C. Lewis, 704 Gratiot street. Mr. Lewis turned them over to the police, and Detective Lawler ascertained that no man named Lewis lived at the number given, but that an employee of the Simmons Hardware Co. named Benjamin J. Williams had been receiving mail so addressed. Mr. Lawler testified that he confronted Williams with the letters, and that he admitted having written them, giving as a reason that his furniture had been mortgaged, and that he hoped this means to secure money to redeem it. The prisoner stated that the letters contained no intimation that the H. C. Lewis by whom they were signed was the manager of the Southern Hotel, and also said that he secured a good steward that he knew that Mr. Lewis, who was an intimate personal friend, would give him a place. Mrs. Mary Williams, wife of the accused, testified that a number of letters were for a young man at the office. When asked if she could identify any of the letters, she replied that she could not, as she was unable to read. Her husband in cross-examination asked her who had suggested the idea of writing the letters, which inquiry aroused her ire. "I don't know," she said, "you were always reading and writing, and I never paid any attention to what you were doing. You told me to get away, that you wanted to have nothing to do with me, and now I have to earn my own living." Williams asked for a continuance until 11 o'clock tomorrow for the purpose of summoning witnesses. This continuance was granted, and in default of bail he was committed to jail.

THE GLASGOW INFORMER.

Little Credence Placed in the Alleged Confession of Anderson.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The story of the confession of a criminal named Anderson, now confined in the Glasgow prison, that he could give important information about the assassination of Lord Leitrim and the plot to kill the Duke of Devonshire, is not given much credence here.

Irishmen think that it is merely a ruse on the part of the man, whose name is said to be Anderson, to gain his liberty by endeavoring to do the Government a service in implicating some one against whom there is no other proof in the assassinations.

James Carey, in whose murder the prisoners Carey left the country, and extraordinary precautions were taken by the Dublin police to conceal his destination. These precautions, largely through Carey's own behavior, proved unavailing, and he was tracked to South Africa by one Patrick O'Donnell, who shot and killed him on board the steamer Melrose at Port Elizabeth.

O'Donnell was subsequently brought back to England and placed on trial for Carey's murder in the Central Criminal Court, where he was finally convicted and sentenced to be hanged. He was executed at Newgate Dec. 17, 1888.

Leitrim was assassinated in 1878, on the 23 day of April. On that day Lord Leitrim, while riding near Milford on the shore of Milford Bay, was shot by persons lying in ambush. His car driver was killed too, being struck in the face with a ball and his chest and being riddled with shot. His clerk, who was always with him, and was killed, received two wounds in the head. Lord Leitrim's skull was fractured and that the left side of his head covered many shots and was much battered. His Lordship's left arm was also fractured in two places. His revolver had been taken from him, and it is believed, used against him. It was empty when found.

For thirty years Lord Leitrim had been at war with his tenants. He spent most of his time in harassing his poorer neighbors by suits of law, but the worst trait was shown in his brutal attempts to dislodge the wives and daughters of his tenants, and to accomplish this his influence as a peer and magistrate and his power as a landlord were used without fear or restraint.

In March, 1878, a dozen of the tenantry met and decided that it was necessary to resort to the last means in their power to preserve their lives and the honor of their daughters and wives. All swore to be true to the cause in life or death, and they decided to act at once.

On April 2 Lord Leitrim left Manor Vaughan

to go to Milford, en route to Londonderry. He was attended by a butler named Neenan, who sat on the car by his side, with the driver in front. There was a second car containing his valet and another butler. All were well armed.

The assassins had stationed themselves behind a clump of low trees, close to the road, armed with double barreled guns. From the roof of a cabin 400 yards away on the hillside a white cloth was displayed. This was the signal that the Earl was coming. His indifference to danger was manifested by the manner in which he divided his party. The second car was 100 yards away and entirely hidden by a hollow in the road. A short time before Lord Leitrim had evicted an aged widow named Algie, and opposite her ruined cabin he fell.

Three of the party had been soldiers and were good shots, and each brought down his man. The driver was killed on the spot. The butler ran back to the hind car and dropped dead in the road; but the Earl was alive when his enemies surrounded him. While making an effort to draw his pistol he received the three loads of swan shot in the body, and when the party behind came up he was dead.

And, save the ruins of a gun and an old horse pistol, nothing was left to indicate the identity of his slayers. Nor were they ever traced.

ST. LOUIS, THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 4, 1892.

SOCIETY IS DULL.

Few Social Events of Any Importance Occur.

NOT MANY OF THE TOURISTS HAVE YET RETURNED.

Two or Three Weeks More of Delicacies Niente, and Then Fashion's Devotees Will Plunge Into the Swim-Departures, Returns and Visitors-General Gossip of the Social World.

The number of people who have left the city during the summer season has never been so great as it is at present. Ever since the close of June there has been a steady stream of tourists setting their faces northward, westward and eastward, until at present there are scarcely any of the society ladies left. The exodus to Europe has been remarkably large and the seashore summer resorts are unusually well patronized by St. Louis people. In fact, the registers of the leading hotels read like pages from the St. Louis Blue Book. The Northern Lake contingent is also strong, and those who are visiting the Western mountains and the Yellowstone are numbered by the thousands. As a result the social world, as far as St. Louis is concerned, has almost ceased to exist. The only social event of importance, the week of any note was the marriage of Miss Madge Fredericks to Mr. William Grayson, which took place on Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride, No. 347 Cook avenue. The bride and groom left for the Yellowstone for their wedding trip.
